Animals on Mars is an interactive team building game where players play in teams to send animals to the newly terraformed Mars.

Players work in small teams and each take on the role of Captain, Pilot, Vet or Engineer. Time is running out, so teams must work together effectively to complete their mission on time. Their mission is to send a variety of animals to Mars to help terraform it into a biodiverse paradise.

The game is played over multiple rounds. Each round, a team has the chance to send one animal to Mars before time runs out. Once the countdown has run out all teams will be able to see who successfully launched a rocket to Mars, and which animal they sent.

After each mission, players will see how their team's actions are contributing to the shared goal of terraforming Mars.

Keep an eye on other teams' choices, as what they buy will affect the cost of rockets and fuel in the market - and also the number of biodiversity points each animal offers. Players will also see how their actions are changing the face of Mars.

If teams successfully launch missions with a variety of animals, they will see Mars transform from a cold desert world to a lush paradise.

At the end of the game all teams will see the final results. Animals on Mars can be played competitively, where the winning team is the one that has earned the most biodiversity points; or cooperatively, where all of the teams are aiming to achieve a certain final score.

Whichever way you play, Animals on Mars is an exciting, engaging and social way to get groups chatting, cheering and working together.
